AGRICULTURAL.

Cotton Prospects.

Washington, November 15—Official reports to the department of agriculture indicate that the season has been extremely favorable for gathering cotton, except in some portions of North Carolina. Frost has injured the top crop in the northern belt, notably in Arkansas. The fibre is cleaner than usual and of superior quality in the southern belt. Drouth in the Gulf States, rain storms in the Carolinas, the boll worm in the Southwest, and the caterpillar in certain locations near the Gulf States, arthe chief causes of injury to the crop. The harvest will be completed at a much earlier date than usual. The crop must be smaller than that of last year, however favorable and long the remaining season for gathering, in the comparison with the last crop. The percentages of the Atlantic coast States are relatively larger, by reason of the poor returns of 1875, and smaller in the Southwest, from comparison with the remarkable yield of that region. They are as follow: turns of 1875, and smaller in the Southwest, from comparison with the remarkable yield of that region. They are as follow: North Carolina 92, South Carolina 99; Geor-gia 110, Florida 110, Alabama 77, Missis-sippi 78, Louisiana 83, Texas 100, Arkansas 74, Tennessee 101.

73, Tennessee 101.

The average is between eighty-eight and eighty-nine; indicating, without reference to the remainder of the picking season, nearly nine-tenths of the crop of 1875.

7. As there is every reason to believe that in every city many contagious diseases are widely apread by means of the schools, either from the attendance of children who come from infected houses, or who may be actually suffering themselves from unrecognized sickness, or who may have resumed their studies when convalescent from these diseases before recovery is complete, therefore no child should be allowed to attend school when diphtheria exists in its family, nor when it has itself any symptoms, no matter how slight, which should arouse suspicion; nor when it is convalescent from the disease, until the attending physician deems it perfectly sate for it to do so. It is far better that a child should be absent from school for a few days, than that any risk should be incurred of transmitting the disease to others.

Precautions to be Taken for the Prevention of Diphtheria.

Precautions to be Taken for the Prevention of Diphtheria.

Owing to the extensive prevalence of diphtheria in the community, the health officer desires, as a precaution, to call the attention of all, particularly of parents, to the following suggestions:

1. Since diphtheria, in a large degree, seems to be caused by flith, especially that arising from stagnant water, detective drainage, etc., it is incumbent upon the citizens, particularly those who inhabit houses not possessing the proper sewer connections to keep their premises in all respects as clean as possible. Rigid sanitary inspection is now proceeding, and for your own good lend your assistance in this direction to the Health Department.

2. Keep your children away from the houses, and from intercourse with the inmates of houses where the disease has attacked any member of your family, iso late that member as completely as possible, without even waiting to be advised upon this point by your physicians.

4. Although it has not been definitely settled that diphtheria is geontagious after death, yet as long as there is a reasonable doubt that such may be the ease, do not allow your children to attend the funerals of those who have died from it, particularly where such funerals take place from the house.

5. At the outset the disease is very often where such funerals take place from the house.

5. At the outset the disease is very often insiduous, no local symptoms being complained of or recognized by the parent until too late for successful treatment. Examine your children's throats from time to time, and it any undue redness or swelling is discovered, or if you are in doubt in regard to the appearances, send immediately for a physician, in order that treatment, if it is necessary, should be commenced early. This is particularly important, since the disease is much more successfully treated in its early stages than later, when it may terminate fatally in spite of all treatment. These precautions should be taken without fail, and daily inspection made of the throat, where the disease has already attacked one member of the family.

6. Suspicion should always be excited when a child complains of a sore throat, or when without any complaint it is languid, feverish, and has a discharge from its nostrils. In either event your physician should be summoned.

7. As there is every reason to believe that in avery city many contagious diseases

7. As there is every reason to believe

Death et Rufus Renfre.

It was with regret we announced the death ot Rufus Kenfre, was died on the morning of the seventh of November, 1876. The deceased was an intelligent colored man, who had been reared in this community, and at the time of his death was administrator of public accounts of the city of Shreveport, which position he had filled acceptably for a long while. He had many friends among the whites as well as among his own race. He died of what is known as Bright's disease of the kidneys, in the twenty-eighth year of his age. He will be greatly mourned by his family and large number of friends.—Shreveport Telegram.

The election can not be thrown into the House of Representatives. Let us relieve Demecrats from that delusion. The constitution provides that if no person shall receive a majority of the electoral vote, then the House may elect; not that they may do so in any case where there may be a failure to canvass and declare the vote. There is no possible contingency now where there can be a tie between Hayes and Tilden. One must necessarily receive a majority. It is the duty of Congress to meet, therefore, on the second Wednesday in February, and canvass the electoral returns. The House may refuse, but such refusal would be simply revolutionary, and that body would gain no right to elect its candidate.
